The trial judge abused her discretion and violated federal due process rights by not allowing Mr. Keown's motions in limine to evidence regarding "Kaiser Soze", his prior bad acts and Google searches done on the Sony VAIO and by allowing the Commonwealth to introduce Julie Keown's statements and emails over defense objections.

Allowing the jury to infer malice/intent to kill from the use of a standard of the inference for intent to kill.

GROUND FOUR: Violation of the petitioner's constitutional right to be protected from unreasonable searches and seizures

- (a) Supporting facts (Do not argue or cite law. Just state the specific facts that support your claim.):

The court erred in not suppressing the computer forensic search results because the warrant was not supported by probable cause and because the warrant was not sufficiently particularized because the affidavit did not provide a substantial basis to believe that the Sony VAIO contained evidence relating to the charge of murder and the Commonwealth failed to provide a search protocol when seeking the warrant which created an impermissible general warrant.
